

Healthcare data are sometimes kept in isolated registries and databases making access a long, complex and imperfect process. Sweden has a unique opportunity to follow a patient's disease journey through different care providers learning, for example, what medical treatments are most effective and for whom.

95%

of Swedes are positive to share their data for improved healthcare¹

Increased data access, would lead to people living healthier and longer lives^{2, 3, 4}

¹ <http://www.forskasverige.se/wp-content/uploads/Opinion2018.pdf>

² Taipale, H., et al., Schizophr Res, 2017.

³ Tiihonen, J., et al., JAMA Psychiatry, 2017.

⁴ Rockberg, J., et al., EULAR, 2015.

This message is supported by the AmCham Life Science Working Committee representing 11 American life science companies that want to keep and increase our research and investments within Life Science in Sweden

AbbVie, Amgen, Biogen, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Celgene, GE, IQVIA, Janssen, Microsoft, MSD, Pfizer

www.amcham.se